How did the Fund perform in the last year?

Class Y Shares underperformed its benchmark, a hybrid of 60% MSCI World Index (Net) (USD Hedged) and 40% Bloomberg Global Aggregate Index (USD Hedged) for the 12-month period ending September 30, 2024.

The Fund's underweight position in global equities detracted from performance for the reporting period, while its broad exposure to commodities and overweight allocation to global sovereign bonds, including global inflation-linked bonds, contributed to relative performance.

Among the Fund's sub-advisors, AQR Capital Management, LLC and PanAgora Asset Management Inc. underperformed the hybrid benchmark during the reporting period due mainly to their underweight allocations to global equities, which performed well, driven by resilient corporate earnings and improving economic sentiment, particularly in the U.S. Overweights to inflation-related assets and nominal bonds benefited both managers. Commodities saw mixed performance but generally ended the period with positive returns; energy prices declined, while precious metals outperformed. Nominal bonds benefited from the anticipation of interest-rate cuts by central banks, and, despite signs of moderating inflation, Treasury Inflation-Protected Securities (TIPS) were supported by attractive yields relative to nominal Treasuries. SEI Investments Management Corporation (SIMC) replaced PanAgora Asset Management Inc. after the sub-advisor was terminated late in the reporting period. SIMC's performance was bolstered by inflation-related assets such as TIPS, and positions in commodities, which performed well in August and September, despite signs of moderating inflation.

Derivatives had a significant impact on Fund performance for the reporting period. Sovereign bond index futures, interest-rate swaps, and sovereign bond total-return swaps produced positive returns as global interest rates declined. Developed and emerging-market equity futures contributed positively to performance. The Fund's strategic commodity exposure through futures and swaps also benefited performance. Forward-currency contracts on emerging-market currencies detracted from the Fund's absolute and relative performance, while developed-market currency forward contracts, used to hedge foreign-currency risk against the U.S. dollar, had a positive impact for the period.
