How did the Fund perform in the last year?

The Fund slightly outperformed its benchmark, the Bloomberg GNMA Index (TR) (USD), for the 12-month period ending January 31, 2025.

In September 2024, the Federal Reserve (Fed) implemented a larger-than-expected 50-basis-point (0.50%) cut in the federal-funds rate after being on pause since July 2023. The Fed followed that up with additional reductions of 25 basis points at its November and December meetings before pausing again in January 2025. After moving toward its 2% target during the first half of the reporting period, progress on inflation stalled during the fourth quarter of 2024, prompting the Fed to transition to a “wait-and-see” approach as the central bank continues to evaluate incoming data as well as the implications that new trade and immigration policies will have on prices. Yields at the front end of the U.S. Treasury curve declined during the reporting period given easier monetary policy, while yields at the intermediate and long ends rose and the yield curve normalized.

Fund performance for the reporting period was bolstered by security selection within agency mortgage-backed securities (MBS) as Wellington Management Company, the Fund's sub-adviser, preferred specified pools with better convexity profiles over to be announced (TBA) issues. Allocations to agency commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS) and collateralized mortgage obligations (CMOs) contributed to Fund performance as the sectors generated more stable cash flows. Modest short positions in Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) and Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (FHLMC) securities detracted from performance.

The Fund used derivatives on a limited basis during the period. The Fund employed U.S. Treasury futures to manage yield-curve exposure and overall portfolio duration. The Fund used Treasury futures and TBA forward contracts to manage duration, yield-curve, and market exposures (TBA forward contracts confer the obligation to buy or sell future debt obligations of the three U.S. government-sponsored agencies that issue or guarantee MBS—FNMA, FHLMC, and GNMA). Treasury futures had no impact on Fund performance.
