How did the Fund perform in the last year?

The Fund outperformed its benchmark, the ICE BofA 1-3 Year U.S. Treasury Index (USD), for the 12-month period ending January 31, 2025.

In September 2024, the Federal Reserve (Fed) implemented a larger-than-expected 50-basis-point (0.50%) cut in the federal-funds rate after being on pause since July 2023. The Fed followed that up with additional reductions of 25 basis points at its November and December meetings before pausing again in January 2025. After moving toward its 2% target during the first half of the reporting period, progress on inflation stalled during the fourth quarter of 2024, prompting the Fed to transition to a “wait-and-see” approach as the central bank continues to evaluate incoming data as well as the implications that new trade and immigration policies will have on prices. Yields at the front end of the U.S. Treasury curve declined during the reporting period given easier monetary policy, while yields at the intermediate and long ends rose and the yield curve normalized.

Fund performance for the reporting period benefited from a sizeable overweight to and security selection in agency mortgage-backed securities (MBS), as Wellington Management Company, the Fund’s sub-adviser, preferred specified pools over to be announced (TBA) issues. Wellington favored low-coupon Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) securities and the belly of the coupon stack for Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) and Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (FHLMC) issues. Off-benchmark allocations to agency collateralized mortgage obligations (CMOs) and agency commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS) contributed to Fund performance.

The Fund used derivatives on a limited basis during the period. The Fund employed U.S. Treasury futures to manage yield-curve exposure and overall portfolio duration. The Fund used Treasury futures and TBA forward contracts, which confer the obligation to buy or sell future debt securities of the three U.S. government-sponsored agencies that issue or guarantee MBS—FNMA, FHLMC, and GNMA—to manage duration, yield-curve and market exposures. Treasury futures did not have a material impact on Fund performance.
