How did the Fund perform in the last year?

The Fund outperformed its benchmark, the Bloomberg Short U.S. Treasury 9-12 Month Index (USD), for the 12-month period ending January 31, 2025.

In September 2024, the Federal Reserve (Fed) implemented a larger-than-expected 50-basis-point (0.50%) cut in the federal-funds rate after being on pause since July 2023. The Fed followed that up with additional reductions of 25 basis points at its November and December meetings before pausing again in January 2025. After moving toward its 2% target during the first half of the reporting period, progress on inflation stalled during the fourth quarter of 2024, prompting the Fed to transition to a “wait-and-see” approach as the central bank continues to evaluate incoming data as well as the implications that new trade and immigration policies will have on prices. Yields at the front end of the U.S. Treasury curve declined during the reporting period given easier monetary policy, while yields at the intermediate and long ends rose and the yield curve normalized.

Fund performance for the period was bolstered by an overweight to corporate bonds, as well as holdings in securitized prime auto loans and credit cards. Allocations to AAA rated collateralized loan obligations (CLOs) also contributed to performance. Both of the Fund's sub-advisers, MetLife Investment Management (MetLife) and Wellington Management Company (Wellington), contributed to Fund performance, benefiting from holdings in corporates and asset-backed securities (ABS). Wellington's performance was also enhanced by overweights to non-agency mortgage-backed securities (MBS) and AAA rated CLOs, while MetLife's allocation to prime auto ABS had a positive impact.

The Fund employed U.S. Treasury futures during the period to efficiently manage duration and yield-curve exposures. The Fund used to be announced (TBA) forward contracts, which confer the obligation to buy or sell future debt securities of the three U.S. government-sponsored agencies that issue or guarantee MBS—Federal National Mortgage Association, Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, and Government National Mortgage Association—to manage market exposures. None of these had a meaningful impact on Fund performance.
