Class F Shares outperformed its benchmark, the ICE BofA U.S. 3-Month Treasury Bill Index, for the 12-month period ending September 30, 2024.

The Fund's balance sheet consists of cash equivalents, which generated positive interest income over the reporting period. The Fund generates its active return through positions in exchange traded futures contracts. The largest contributors to the Fund's relative performance were long positions in several equity market indices, most notably the MSCI EAFE Index and the Nasdaq 100 Index, which benefited from rising stock prices over the period. Equity index exposure peaked during the first quarter of 2024, and has since been reduced, but remains significant. Currencies were a small positive contributor to the Fund's relative performance, driven by a short position in the Japanese yen. Fixed-income trading was a detractor from performance for the reporting period. The Fund maintained a short position in 10- and 30 year government bond futures, which weighed on performance as yields declined over the period (and bond prices rose).
