How did the Fund perform in the last year?

Class F Shares performed in line with its benchmark, the ICE BofA U.S. 3-Month Treasury Bill Index, for the 12-month period ending September 30, 2024.

The reporting period began with the Federal Reserve (Fed) pausing after hiking short-term interest rates 11 times for a cumulative 525 basis points (5.25%) during 2022 and early 2023. Despite some bumps in the road, inflation largely moderated during the first nine months of 2024, and the Fed began its rate-cutting cycle with an aggressive 50-basis-point (0.50%) cut at its September 2024 meeting. The supply of U.S. Treasury bills during the reporting period remained elevated, with the Treasury decreasing the weighted average maturity of its issuance given demand at the front end of the yield curve. Government money market assets under management reached peak levels as the yield curve remain inverted (short-term yields exceeded longer-term yields). Fundamentals for banks, the primary issuers of certificates of deposit (CDs) and commercial paper, remained strong, with healthy balance sheets and reduced leverage profiles supporting the sector.

BlackRock Advisors, LLC (BlackRock) is the Fund's sole sub-advisor. BlackRock's performance for the reporting period benefited from positions in commercial paper and CDs, both of which offered higher yield relative to comparable-duration U.S. Treasuries. Fund performance over the full reporting period reflected the higher interest-rate environment. BlackRock adjusted the Fund's weighted average maturity throughout the period as the Fed moved from being on hold to an interest-rate cut. BlackRock also reduced the Fund's positions in floating-rate paper given the Fed's pivot to easing monetary policy.
